CVC Phoneme Segmentation Pack

The CVC Phoneme Segmentation Cards and Worksheets help children hear individual sounds, connect sounds with letters, and practice building, spelling, and reading words. Use the activities in small groups, literacy centers, morning tubs, or supported independent practice.

What's Included

- 186 picture cards, organized by beginning consonant sound.
- 10 alternative cards for words ending in x, with a divided final box.
- 16 beginning consonant worksheets.
- 10 short vowel worksheets.
- 10 mixed review worksheets.
- 1 blank recording page for writing words and drawing matching pictures.
- 2 alternative worksheets with divided final boxes for fox and wax.

How to Use

1. Name the pictures together. Introduce the intended words before children begin. Select words that match the letter–sound relationships you are teaching.
2. Say and segment. Have children say a word, then tap one sound space for each sound they hear.
3. Build the word. Use letter tiles or magnetic letters to represent the sounds. Blend the sounds and read the completed word.
4. Write and record. Children can complete a picture worksheet or write words and draw matching pictures on the blank recording page.
5. Begin with a small selection of words and model the routine before children work independently.

Using Words Ending in x

Words such as box, fox, and six have three letters but four sounds because x represents /k/ /s/. Use the split-box versions when counting or tapping sounds. For example, children segment box as /b/ /ŏ/ /k/ /s/, tapping each of the four spaces. When spelling, they write b, o, and one x across the dotted line in the final box.

The original three-box versions provide one space per letter for word building and spelling. Choose three-sound words when using the blank recording page for sound segmentation.

More Ways to Practice

- Sort cards by beginning sound, short vowel sound, or rhyme.
- Have a partner name a picture while the other child builds or writes the word.
- Use alphabet stamps or laminate pages for dry-erase practice.
- Say selected words aloud for children to spell and illustrate.

Skills Practiced

Phoneme segmentation, sound–letter mapping, blending, spelling, handwriting, and vocabulary development.

Science of Reading Connection

Use these activities alongside explicit phonics instruction. Select words that follow your teaching sequence and guide children through listening for sounds, connecting sounds with letters, and blending to read.

Happy Teaching :)

Short Vowel and Mixed Review Worksheets

The short vowel and mixed review worksheets use a selection of the words listed above. The short vowel worksheets also include bib and rub.

Words Ending in x

The words fox and wax have three letters but four sounds because x represents /k/ /s/. Alternative worksheets with a divided final box are included at the end of the packet. Use these versions for sound segmentation, writing one x across the two smaller sections.
